November 1 meeting

Meet the Pros, humor and an inspirational entrepreneur

Two hilarious comedy programs by a humor master and an inspirational luncheon keynote by someone who built an empire out of an egg — plus our annual Meet the Pros sessions — highlight NSA/NC's November 1 meeting, which will be held at the Clarion Hotel, next door to our usual meeting place (see box below).

Kurtis Matthews, director of the San Francisco Comedy College, and Jane Pollak, a member of NSA/Connecticut and an internationally known artist who creates gem-quality collectibles and jewelry utilizing the art of Ukrainian Easter egg decorating, will be our speakers.

MORNING PROGRAM
KURTIS MATTHEWS
Anyone can be funny . . . and that means you!

Kurtis will teach us — and show us — how anyone can be funny by explaining what funny people do that unfunny people don't do.

"All comedy happens in the mind," says Kurtis, who knew and admired the late John Cantu.

"A funny person is constantly re-interpreting that. I'll talk about what keeps people from being funny, and then I'll mention at least seven tips on how speakers can be funny right away. Many speaking skills are transferable to

November 1 meeting at Clarion Hotel

Because the ballroom at the Westin is not available on November 1, and since our Meet the Pros meeting is usually our most heavily attended, this meeting has been moved next door to the Clarion Hotel, where we will be comfortable in that hotel's spacious ballroom.

We will have greeters at the Westin — just in case your car takes you to that hotel's parking lot by rote — who will cheerfully send you to the Clarion.

Unintended consequences

By Ric Giardina

As speakers we've all had this experience: someone rushes up after a program to tell you they really identified with what you said.

Maybe they tell you their life has changed or will change because of it. Then they feed back words you know you never uttered, and you're dumbfounded!

What gives?

I think these situations arise because of what I've come to call The Speaker's Law of Unintended Consequences.

The general Law of Unintended Consequences states that actions of people — and especially of governments — always have effects that are unanticipated or unintended. As you might imagine, there are both positive and negative unintended consequences.

On the platform, we always have intended consequences we expect to achieve — raised awareness, motivation, education, entertainment, and so on. Surprisingly, though, the most powerful moments people experience seem to arise as unintended consequences. It's as though folks aren't hearing what we say, but what they need to hear.

Our role?

Often, it's nothing more than creating an environment of honesty and openness in which people hear what they have to say to themselves — sometimes for the first time — even if they think it's us doing the talking.

Whether we are motivational speakers, trainers, coaches, or consultants, in a way that's what we provide — the opportunity to look at life's situations from a different perspective.

It's also useful to remember that while we can reframe life's situations, any and all movement that takes place in our audience members is a function of individual endeavor . . . and so often the result of unintended consequences.

NSA survey results

Here are the results of the National Speakers Association 2003 Member Survey, conducted via web poll between February 25 and April 3. There were 814 respondents.

- 34.7% of the respondents have been speaking professionally between 11–20 years; 27.8% between 6–10 years.
- 24.9% have been members between 3–5 years, 24.9% between 6–10 years, and 22.5% between 11–20 years.
- 52.3% are male, 47.7% female.
- 46.6% are between the ages of 46–55.
- 37.8 percent are college graduates, while 35.2% hold master's degrees and 13.5% doctoral degrees.
- 15.8% are CSPs.
- 64.5% earn 100% of their income from speaking and related services.

Barry Wishner in November . . . Patricia Fripp in January

NSA/NC's Celebrity Series has two great programs lined up — home visits with two of our chapter's most successful and highly paid speakers.

Our 2003-2004 Celebrity Series kicks off Saturday, November 22, with an opportunity to spend three hours behind the scenes with Barry Wishner and his wife and business partner, Barbara. The program will be held from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Barry and Barbara's program —The Anatomy of a Booking —will cover marketing by phone and snail mail, as well as electronically; developing program titles that sell; identifying markets; building a business model; developing original material; creating collateral material; developing and writing supportive materials (one-sheet, video, articles, etc.); and producing a great video.

Barry is a nationally known speaker and expert on business execution and seizing future opportunities in business.

November 1 meeting > from front page comedy. In terms of communicating with people and dealing with audiences, it's pretty similar. People want to be entertained.

"What makes us accessible to humans is connecting through the heart. Data and information connect through their brains; humor connects through their hearts. If you have great material and you're humorous in a natural way, your message will go farther."

Comedy, Kurtis says, is about shattering perceptions.

"For example, a person sees a bus and calls it a bus; a funny person says it's a metal SARS carrier," he says. "Or, take imitation crab. Some would call it a not-so-good food by-product. A funny person would say it's crab that does a bad Jack Nicholson impression.

"I will teach you how to do this."

Kurtis will talk about the structure of comedy, and how to create comedic material from scratch.

LUNCH PROGRAM

JANE POLLAK

If I Can Make a Business Out of This, You Can Make a Business Out of Anything . . . and . . . Things

I Wish I'd Known When I Started My Business: 12 Tools and Strategies for Growing Your Speaking Career.

Jane will offer inspirational highlights from two of her most requested entrepreneurship programs. If you're seriously interested in taking your business to a higher level or are eager for a burst of enthusiasm and ideas, Jane will provide you with a toolbox full of tips and strategies for growing your business, including:

- The foundations of small business success.
- How professional development is fueled by personal growth.
- How to organize your business with a simple tool.
- How to create a world-class image.

MEET THE PROS

First session in November

Our annual Meet the Pros session will kick off our November meeting.

Pros lined up so far include Patricia Fripp (presentation skills), Ed Brodow (negotiations), Mike Larsen (book publishing), Mitchell Friedman (PR), Allen Klein (humor), Marilyn Snyder (PowerPoint), Jenny de St. Georges (international speaking), Roberta Guise (marketing, 1-sheets, etc.), Rebecca Morgan (creating income without leaving home), Carolyn Millet (getting started in the speaking industry), Sue Dyer (building expert status), Caterina Rando (producing low-cost, high-profit products), Elayne Savage (how to get interviewed), Scott Marcus (speaking on cruise ships) and Mike Robbins (finding mentors).

More pros and topics may be added as the meeting nears.

- How to develop product with the help of a business coach.
- How to create a Mastermind group for your business.
- How to trust your gut.

Audiences members will be inspired to take the next step in developing their own small businesses, encouraged to evolve their businesses in response to market demands and motivated to face the challenges of every small business owner.

A former art teacher, Jane's career shot to a new level when asked to decorate an egg for the White House's annual Easter Egg Roll. Not long after, this wife and mother was running a full-blown home business, speaking internationally and appearing on national television shows including NBC's Today Show, CNN, HGTV and Lifetime.

Jane's work has been featured at the Guggenheim Museum Shop in New York City, the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC and the Ronald Reagan Library in Simi Valley.

In 2002, the Small Business Administration named Jane the Home-Based Business Advocate of the Year for Connecticut and New England.

SUPER SESSION

KURTIS MATTHEWS

Seriously, You're Not as Morose as You Thought

In this workshop, Kurtis will take several volunteers from the audience, picked on the spot, and look at portions of their programs.

"I'll show people how to make these sections funny, make those specific parts of their talk work better, and be more comfortable in front of the audience.

"The audience always matches your state; if you're nervous, the audience will be nervous. If you're comfortable, the audience will be comfortable and they'll like you, even if you're not funny."
